French or Spanish custom is that the match should be unequal to warrant the serenade. A widower marrying a widow is not unequal; two young couple is not unequal, and so on. So all may understand when they are right or wrong. Next, it is highly improper, ungenteel and indecorous, to exhibit feeling, or use profane language, or to injure any property, or carry away that that does not belong to those engaged. These irregularities, under the old rule, would have excluded the perpetrator, or subjected him to the bitterest secon of his associates.

These rules are not always observed. Indeed, they are scarcely ever observed here, where little is really known of the chiravarity was are sorry for it. We wish it were otherwise.
